The Time to Cut Tobacco.

Fork, N. C., June 28, 1916.

Editor The Review:

Forty-nine years ago I began growing tobacco. A few years later I decided that there were certain days better than others on which to cut tobacco for it to cure up nicely and have a rich, "waxy" and heavy body. To find out the way to tell these dates, and tell them ahead, has been a hard job, but I was finally successful. To explain let me say that tobacco has an oily substance, which is its natural possession. It has a sap (water) like other vegetation. When the sap rises it runs the oil out through the pores of the leaves, and the principle that oil and water won't mix, and the oil being the lighter, is pushed out by the sap. Tobacco, cut in this state, will be light and "chaffy." You see there is nothing but sap in the tobacco, and when cured this sap is gone. It evaporates and leaves the tobacco light and worthless. But to cut tobacco when the sap is down and the oil has full sway, you can cure it up nicely and with a heavy body; it will be rich and "waxy." This happens because the tobacco is full of oil, instead of sap, and the oil can't evaporate and remains in the tobacco to make it rich and heavy. It has been my experience that we must cut tobacco when there is oil in it if we expect to have oil in it when cured. For instance, you have experienced cutting one week and having excellent luck, and then cut a few days later, probably off the same piece of ground, and with riper tobacco and have no luck at all.

I shall be pleased to answer any correspondence from tobacco growers who may want to write me provided postage is sent for reply.

Yours truly,
D. V. DAVIS,

The kidney secretions were irregular in passage and causing me a great deal of distress. My back was so weak that after stooping I had to take hold of something to pull myself up again. I was troubled by dizzy spells and my head ached constantly. My rest at night was broken and in the morning I was so tired and weak that I could hardly drag myself around. Doan's Kidney Pills completely cured me and I am grateful to them."

It was so extremely hot Thursday that Judge Dalton decided to hold court under the spreading branches of the large Elm in front of the court of justice. Henry Thompson was the only culprit awaiting judgment and the judge looked kindly on Thompson for his first offence of being drunk and let him off with the costs in the case.

Captain Dallas Zollicoffer has replied to the telegram sent by the High Point chapter of the Daughters of the Confederacy, as follows: "Your beautiful and considerate telegram received. It was read to my boys who were deeply touched. Our thoughts are ever with our loved ones at home. May a merciful God hasten the time when each of us can return to our homes."
